

A Little About Me

Hello, Friend ~

My name is Becky Banks – a homeschool mom of 7 kids. It's a new season for me – the first time in 20 yrs. I don't have a preschooler, toddler, baby and/or all of the above in our home. I cherish the yrs. I've been able to be with my children and am so thankful for the ability to be home with them. While many of my friends are graduating/soon-to-be-graduating their youngest children, my youngest started Kindergarten this year!

I still have a way to go ☐

I LOVE being a mom!

Years ago, as a new mom, I left my teaching position and soon began to learn freelance writing. I had a few articles published and as a couple more boys came along, I laid my writing aside. Well ... they kept coming! I am more than blessed

☐

Fast forward 15-ish yrs. and my “why” is still the same ... My family is my “why.” This blog is where I write. I hope that my 20 yrs. of parenting (the good and the bad) can offer hope and encouragement to someone just as I've been blessed with so many mentor mothers speaking into my life over the years. I blog about the collision of faith, family, motherhood, and homeschooling. I hope that you find encouragement here and possibly answers to the questions you seek. I always love hearing from you, so please leave a comment and let me know you were here!